

Practical Observations on Angling: In the River Trent (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Practical Observations on Angling: In the River Trent Sir, I Have ventured to dedicate the following observations on Angling to you, an amusement which in an age of fashionable dissipation like this has few advocates, I am not vain enough to believe they contain any thing which has escaped your attention, or that the few hours leisure which I have devoted to the subject, will be considered by you of greater importance, than to instruct the young angler in the pursuit of a diversion, national, manly, and entertaining, and which on minute investigation, will be found worthy the attention of sensible men, as it comprehends so considerable a portion of Natural History.
