

The Parallelism of Music Notation and Computer Programs: A Synopsis of the Procedural Logic of Both Disciplines

This book does not aim to instruct readers in the areas of music or computer program. It highlights the connection between music notation and computer programs. The connection is manifested by the common, guiding developmental principles and logic. The controlling logical elements of both areas are systematically presented using appropriate illustrations and descriptions. The music section is done first as most persons would have at least elementary knowledge, or even vague familiarity with same, than with programming. Readers are expected to recognize that a rudimentary music education is vital for young children in relation to their mathematical and logical development.
