

24 Hours in Paris: Certain Points of View

A decision had been made: a quick trip to Paris. The goals: visit and photograph Musee du Louvre, photograph Notre Dame, photograph and climb Tour Eiffel, walk along the Seine and eat some great food. Mission accomplished. There are over four dozen shots offered here: exterior shots of Notre Dame; inside and outside Musee du Louve; of Tour Eiffel as well as from the top, after climbing all of those stairs; along with some shots of the Seine. The photos are presented pretty much in the order as events occurred. The 24 Hours in Paris is the time actually spent in Paris, and does not include the travel time and, as will be seen, the chosen locations were visited for both day and night shots. This, then, is 24 Hours in Paris, a purely photographic journey. Please note: As the portrait-oriented photographs are four-color, they will only appear in color by those who have color Kindle devices and who use Amazons free Kindle apps for PC, MAC, iPad, iPhone, and Android devices. Otherwise, the images on Kindle are displayed in 16 shades of gray, providing great contrast and clarity, but lacking the spectrum of colors which add to viewing pleasure.
