

California Fish and Game (Classic Reprint)

To his Excellency George Stoneman, Governor of California: The Commissioners of Fisheries for the State of California, appointed under an Act of the Legislature, entitled an Act to provide for the restoration and preservation of fish in the waters of the State, approved April 2, 1870, respectfully submit their eighth biennial report. SALMON. This most important of our inland water fish is in great demand, not only by all our citizens for table consumption, but also by the numerous canneries, some twenty-one in number, situated on the banks of the Sacramento, the bays, and in San Francisco, having increased their business in the last few years to large proportions. The average pack now is about 200,000 cases per annum. The boats employed in 1883, in taking salmon, were about 1,200, and are increasing in number. The average catch to each boat is about 1,500 fish, weighing about 21,600,000 pounds, per annum. The increase of catch for the last three years caused a marked decrease in the supply for the year 1883, with a chance of a more marked decrease for the year 1884, the causes of which are many, viz.: First Illicit fishing done during the close season. Second Loss of salmon in the tules. Third The consumption by seals and sea-lions, which are very destructive to salmon and other fish. They follow the fish from the Golden Gate to Rio Vista. Fourth The different kinds of aquatic birds, which are very numerous, and very destructive to the young of all kinds of fish as they are descending from the spawning grounds to the ocean. Fifth Dams and other obstructions near their spawning grounds. These are the principal difficulties over which the Commissioners have no control, except as to the first. THE VIOLATORS OF THE LAW. The Commissioners have exercised their power to abate the evil of illicit fishing, but owing to the limited means at their command, they
