

Aspen Art in the New Mexico Highlands

From first page: The sheep industry in New Mexico dates back to 1598. This collection of photographs begins with the carving of one of the oldest and most universal symbols used by man - the human hand. From hand prints we go to portraits of the herders themselves. The horse is far and away the most common subject carved on aspen trees. Dogs too are a common subject. The mystique of the West is a common theme. (Description by http-mart)
